ARTIST STATEMENT

Comfort, suburbia's most heralded attribute, is clarified in the manicured lawns, large houses, wide streets, and bright afternoon skies. For the majority, it is the optimal place to raise children, lead out safe lives, accrue wealth, and retire. Yet such prosaic pleasantries fall under scrutiny at night, as if the absence of light's veil brings an end to the day's charade. Night—only then does the endless sleep of our days come to life.
